Description

The former Salem Methodist Episcopal Church and the adjacent Salem Walker Cemetery occupy a two-and-one-half-acre tract at the southeast corner of Angle and Tower roads in Salem Township, a formerly rural area at the western edge of the Detroit metropolitan area that is now seeing substantial suburban development. The church, a clapboarded, gable-roof building with a simple, square-plan, spireless belfry, has remained virtually unaltered since its construction in 1864. The Salem Walker Cemetery, fronted on the street sides by an ornamental iron fence dating from 1909, contains graves dating back to 1834.

Now generally known as the Salem Walker Church, the former Salem Methodist Episcopal Church faces north on Angle Road, just east of Tower Road in Salem Township. The church is a frame, front-gable, Greek Revival building whose pedimented facade displays a central, enframed entrance flanked on either side by a tall window with blinds. The gabled tympanum displays a seven-sided blind oculus. An anta-like treatment of the building's corners supports broad architrave and frieze bands and a heavy classical cornice that extend around the building's front and sides. The side walls each contain three sixteen-over-twelve-light, sash windows. Surmounting the facade is a louvered, square belfry topped by a shallow hip roof. The belfry's classical finish is similar to that of the body of the building. The belfry stands on a low, square-plan tower treated in similar fashion, but with paired antae on each facade at the corners. The church stands on a fieldstone foundation.

The church's interior is probably the least altered of any Greek Revival church interior in Michigan. Two aisles extend from the vestibule to a cross-aisle before a rectangular, one-step high chancel area set against the center of the church's south or rear wall. The auditorium contains four tiers of pews of the mid-nineteenth-century sofa seat type with scroll ends -- one against each wall and two side-by-side in the center. Flanking the chancel on either side against the rear wall is a small block of pews set facing the chancel. The chancel platform is fronted by a railing having a rectangular-section cap and turned, columnar balusters. No pulpit is now present.

The auditorium retains its original, flat, plastered ceiling. In 1987, because of continuing problems with the plaster detaching from the wood lath, four sets of two-by-six-inch wood beams cased in boarding were installed beneath the ceiling and bolted to the roof trusses to support the ceiling. In the center of the ceiling is a round plaster centerpiece, which displays elaborate, curvilinear foliage and vines.

A gallery for the choir stands directly above the vestibule, its panelled breastwork forming the top of the auditorium's north wall. An unusual feature of the choir gallery is a small, rectangular-plan projection of the breastwork's central portion that housed the choir director. The interior woodwork, including wainscotting, door and window trim, gallery breastwork, chancel railing and pews all retain old grained finishes.

Adjacent to the church lies the Salem Walker Cemetery, which occupies over two acres of land. The cemetery contains approximately 665 graves, of which 220 date from the nineteenth century. It contains a variety of standard-type nineteenth and early twentieth-century monuments and memorials, including a simple marker commemorating the service of Salem's Civil War veterans. An iron fence with arched entrance gateways bearing the legend "Salem Walker Cemetery" encloses the cemetery grounds on the street side. The cemetery grounds also contain a small one-story, hip-roof maintenance shed constructed with walls of rock-face concrete block.

Significance

The Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, built in 1864, may be Michigan's least altered example of Greek Revival church architecture.

Methodist circuit preachers began visiting Salem as early as 1834. Elder C. M. Anderson, who also ministered to South Lyon, Oakland County, established a Methodist class in Salem in 1863. On February 15, 1864, James B. Van Atta, Anthony M. Farley, Lorenzo D. Perkins, William Hollingshead, Ashley Root, John V. King, and John C. Ingalls, acting as trustees, purchased a half-acre of land for a church site from Carlisle and Mary A. Ham for five dollars. The 1881 History of Washtenaw County noted that "In 1864 the M. E. church, in Salem, was dedicated, and the Church organization was perfected, with a membership of about 25. ... Previous to that time there had been a temporary Church organization and preaching at different points in the township..." Services continued at what was later known as the "West Salem Church" until 1912.

The Salem Walker Cemetery, adjacent to which the church stands, predates the church building. Otis Walker entered the west half of the southwest quarter section of Section 9 of Salem Township, which includes the property on which the church and cemetery stand, in 1831. Part of it came into use as a burial ground during the earliest days of white settlement. The earliest burial listed in the cemetery records was that of Amina Bennett, who died on September 15, 1834 at the age of eight years. In 1843, Otis Walker's wife, Sarah, died and was buried in what has become Salem Walker Cemetery. The next year, Otis Walker himself died and was buried in the cemetery in the northeast corner of his property. The 1850 plat map of Washtenaw County showed I. Ham as the property owner and depicted a "grave yard" at the northeast corner of the property.

United States Department of the Interior
National Park Service

The Salem Walker Cemetery Association was organized on June 6, 1908 when Mr. E. T. Walker called a meeting at the church for the purpose of organizing a rural cemetery association under the state enabling law. On August 22, 1908, the association bought an additional one-half acre adjoining the south side of the cemetery from Mrs. E. T. Walker, a relative of Isadore Ham. On March 1, 1909, the board of directors approved the purchase of the present iron fence from a Detroit firm identified in the association records as the "Bardum Fence Company" -- probably E. T. Barnum & Co., a firm which did a big business in ornamental fencing as well as jail cells -- at a cost of $413.94.

The cemetery association voted in May, 1930 to contact the Methodist conference concerning purchase of the long unused former Methodist church. The conference agreed in May, 1931 to quitclaim the church and contents to the association for $200. The association has continued to maintain the building since then. The roof was reshingled in 1939, the belfry repaired in 1944, the roof and damaged plaster repaired in 1954, and the roofing again replaced in 1959. More recently, in 1966, 1974, and 1975, thefts of furnishings and vandalism were reported. In all cases the damage was quickly repaired, but the original church furnishings stolen in 1974 have never been recovered. The building is used for local gatherings and rented for weddings to help generate income for maintenance.

About sixty-five Greek Revival church buildings (that is, churches having at least some Greek Revival design elements such as Classical doorway or belfry detailing) are known to survive of the 200-300 which we estimate were built in Michigan. Nearly all these churches thus far identified were located in the southern four tiers of counties in the Lower Peninsula. In its antae-decorated main body, full front pediment, classical front entrance enframing, square-plan belfry with antae at the corners, and tall, square-head windows, the Salem church is typical of the more modestly scaled Greek Revival churches built for Protestant bodies in Michigan and the northern states from Maine to Minnesota. The (now pulpit-less) raised platform or chancel area with its communion rail around the perimeter on three sides was characteristic of Methodist church buildings during the period during which the church was constructed.

The Salem Methodist Episcopal Church's importance is that it -- alone, as far as we know, of Michigan's Greek Revival churches -- has survived virtually unaltered in the interior as well as exterior. The building continues to stand by itself, with none of the usual parish house or other more modern additions which these church buildings typically have. Even more notable for its survival intact than the exterior is the interior, with its original raised chancel, pews, gallery, grained woodwork.

To: The Washtenaw County Historic District Commission

From: Mark McFadden, Deputy Director mjm

Date: May 18, 1992

Re: Nomination of Salem Methodist Episcopal Church and Salem-Walker Cemetery to the National Register of Historic Places.

The State Bureau of History has asked that The Historic District Commission (HDC) review the National Register Nomination for the Salem Methodist Episcopal Church and the Salem-Walker Cemetery. A State review board meeting will occur on June 5th, the day after the June 4th HDC meeting. I have visited the site and took several slides which will be shown at the June 4th HDC meeting. In addition, I have included information that should prove useful in your formal review.

An on-site inspection revealed that the church and cemetery are of obvious historic significance and both are in very good condition. The site is surrounded by single family residences and farmsteads (see the enclosed Land Use map and Aerial Photograph. The site and surrounding area is zoned AR Agricultural- Residential. The Church and Cemetery were once the center of a small agricultural community. The National Register Description is included in the following pages.
